RIVER HORROR.

Rowena Lee Sinks and 64 Lives Are Lost.

Only Two Men Escape With Their Lives To Tell the Tale—66 Aboard.

Cairo, Ill., March 29.—The beautiful Rowena Lee, the pride of the Lee Line of steamers, parted in the middle at Tyler, Mo., at 4 o'clock this afternoon, and sank in seventy feet of water. All on board perished except Capt. Carrell and one man.

There were sixty-six persons aboard, among whom were Henry Clay Lewis, traveling and soliciting freight agent for the Lee Line Company, and S. C. Humphreys, chief lumber inspector and buyer for the Chicago Mill and Lumber Company of this city.

CONFEDERATE ASSOCIATION

Of Kentucky Will Hold Its Annual Meeting at Lexington April 1.

Lexington, Ky., March 28.—The regular yearly meeting of the members of the Confederate Association of Kentucky will be held at the courthouse in this city at 12 o'clock noon on Saturday, April 1. This meeting is for the election of officers and for the transaction of such other business as may be brought before it.

Among the speakers who have been invited and who have signed their intention of being present are the Hon. Green R. Keller, of Carlisle, and Capt. James Montgomery, of Elizabethtown.

ON TO MALOLOS.

American Forces Steadily Closing in on Aguinaldo.

Manila, March 30.—The towns of Bogave, Bigna and Guiguinto were captured by Maj. Gen. McArthur yesterday, and at 5 o'clock in the afternoon he was within three and a half miles of Malolos. His day's march began at 6 o'clock in the morning, and his advance was constantly resisted by the rebels. At 10 o'clock he had driven them beyond Bacau, early in the afternoon he was at Bigaa and before night he had crossed the river at Guiguinto in the face of heavy fire. The rebels had been less vigorous in their resistance early in the day, but in the afternoon the fighting was fierce.

The rebels burned villages as they retreated and tore up sections of the railroad. Repairs to the road are rapidly made, and the troops will be rapidly supplied over the line to-day. The reported removal of the rebel capital from Malolos to San Fernando has not been confirmed.

CONVICT CAPTURED.

Returned to Prison to Serve Out a Heavy Sentence.

One June 9th last Henry Leavell, a colored boy, was sent to the work house for 30 days. He escaped from prison after serving four days and had been at large until yesterday morning, when he was captured at the home of his mother, in this city, by officer Cravens. He was at once taken before Judge Cansler and sentenced to the work house for 250 days—ten days for each day not worked out on his former sentence.

HOLINESS MEETING.

Will Be Held at Anderson's Hall, Beginning Next Sunday.

Rev. Collins and wife will begin a protracted meeting at Anderson's Hall, in this city, Sunday. The series of meetings will continue for a week or more and there will be two services daily, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and 7 at night.

STONE IS HOT.

Makes a Serious Charge Against One of His Opponents.

Accuses Gen. Hardin of Trying to Get Him to Run Against Blackburn For the Senate.

Winchester, Ky., March 28.—The most interesting development of the visit of Capt. W. J. Stone, who was here yesterday to speak, was the statement he made after his address, and in the presence of a number of friends who had gathered about the stand to congratulate him, that an effort had been made to pull him off the track. Capt. Stone used no name, but it was understood that he referred to Gen. Hardin.

The Captain in his speech denied vehemently a charge that he had ever voted for gold bonds. After his speech he made the following statement to those around him:

"The candidate for Governor who is the author of these whisperings about my record on the money question is the same person who on February 2 called me into one corner of the Willard Hotel, in Louisville, and asked me to withdraw from the race for the gubernatorial nomination, saying that he knew he could win if I was not on the track. He told me that I ought to withdraw, support him for Governor and become myself a candidate for the United States Senate. I replied that the party had already given him the chance to be elected Governor, and now it seemed to me that he ought to give me a chance."

ly, after long delay, obtained permission from the French government to establish a station on the French coast for the purpose of experimenting with wireless telegraphy between England and France announces that he has conducted successful experiments between the south foreland, county of Kent, and Boulogne, at the mouth of the Liane.

The Times this morning prints a 100-word dispatch, the first press message by the Marconi system of wireless telegraphy, describing the experiments between the south foreland and Boulogne-Sur-Mer. The experiments were conducted with the Morse code, which was read as distinctly as if the terminals had been connected by wires.

COST OF THE WARFARE.

Over a Thousand Casualties Since the Rebels First Attacked Our Outposts.

Washington, March 28.—A list in the office of the Adjutant-General shows the casualties in Manila since February 4 to be 157 killed and 84 wounded.

YOUNG CLOVER KILLED.

The Wheat is Thought to Have Escaped Serious Injury.

The temperature dropped six degrees below the freezing point Tuesday night and much of the young clover is reported killed. Some farmers say their entire crop has been destroyed. It is not thought that the wheat suffered greatly, although it may retard its growth for several weeks.

All Set Free.

The seven colored men arrested near Bell on a charge of gaming, were tried before Judge Cansler yesterday and acquitted.

Died of Fever.

A 10-year-old child of Peter Smith, col., died near Casky, Tuesday night of fever.

OFFICIAL CALL.

For the Convention of the Bimetallic League.

The following official call for the convention of the Bimetallic league, to be held in Louisville, Ky., has been issued by the executive committee.

Headquarters Executive Committee League of Bimetallic Clubs of the Ohio Valley Covington, Ky., March 25, 1899. Official Call. In pursuance of the action of the executive committee of the League of Bimetallic clubs of the Ohio Valley, and by virtue of the authority it conferred, the Kentucky members of said committee, namely, Joseph L. Rhineock, of Covington, Ky.; Ramsey Washington, of Newport, Ky., and Jas. P. Tarvin, of Covington, Ky., together with Allen W. Clark, secretary of said executive committee, the four constituting a sub-committee with power to act, it is now ordered, by said executive committee of said league that the third annual convention of said league be held in the city of Louisville, Ky., commencing on Wednesday, the 21st day of May, 1899, at 11 o'clock a. m., to be in session on that day and on June 1 and June 2.

The convention will be composed of delegates from bimetallic organizations of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Kentucky, the basis of representation being as follows:

Every 10 to 1 bimetallic organization in the states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Kentucky shall be entitled to one vote on payment of $1 registration fee to the secretary of the league, Allen W. Clark, Greensburg, Ind., before May 27, 1899. An additional vote will be allowed every organization for each fifty bona fide members or fraction over twenty-five, membership list and applications to be submitted to the secretary by the president or secretary of the organization. Said vote shall be cast by delegates regularly selected by the various organizations, and admission tickets shall be issued for not more than one such delegate for each ten bona fide members of the organization represented.

Organizations to be represented in said convention will send name, list of officers and numbers of members to secretary of said executive committee at Covington, Ky.

JAMES P. TARVIN,
President League of Bimetallic
Clubs of the Ohio Valley.
ALEN W. CLARK, Secretary.

$1,000,000 IN PRESENTS.

Diamonds by The $100,000 Worth
And Silver Trays too
Heavy to Hande.

New York, March 27.—If Miss Virginia Fair were a man and W. K. Vanderbilt a prince it is likely that they would receive wedding presents as costly as those that simply young Americans will get upon the occasion of their presents. There are hundreds of these presents. It will be impossible to put an estimate on their value that would be at all accurate. At least one of them is worth $100,000. All told the cost of the entire lot will be considerably more than $1,000,000.

Of course neither the Vanderbilts nor the Fair relatives have made any appraisal of the cost of the extraordinary assortment of diamonds and other precious stones which have been worked up by the cleverest and most artistic jewelers in the world into tokens of affection and wishes for the future happiness of the young people.

Among the very remarkable presents are two huge solid silver trays; given to the young couple by Mrs. Shepard. These are so heavy that when they were brought out for a visitor to see them it took two men to carry them.

Thinking And Kissing.

In her denunciation of the practice of kissing Miss Margaret Lindley says it should be "decontaminated by every thinking woman." The opinion suggests several questions.

Can a thinking woman discontinue the practice of kissing? In other words, if a thinking woman kisses? or rather, are thinking women kissed?

Does the kissing woman think? And if she doesn't think, how is she ever to discontinue the practice?

What is the connection between thinking and kissing? Anyhow? What has thinking to do with kissing or kissing with thinking?

Miss Lindley gives one brain tag.

HOW TO QUIET A CHILD.

Fanciful fears of the Young—Best Way of Treating Them.

A little girl frequently fancied she saw bears and tigers whenever she happened to awake in the night. Presumably she dreamed of some danger, may be on account of having eaten too much for supper or having eaten the wrong kind of food. At any rate, she frequently awoke crying in the night, and in her fear interpreted the dim outlines of a dress or a curtain as a fearful beast was about to attack her. The best thing to do is to deal tenderly with such fancies and remove the child as far as possible from the object that has caused her chagrin. Then, if you can do so without disturbing the other children, light the lamp and let it fall full on the thing that has given rise to her fear. Be slow and express your opinion first as a kind of preliminary assumption that the bear may after all be mamma's skirt or the curtain moving in the draft; and when this comforting probability is understood, follow up your advantage and declare it to be a good joke that a harmless piece of cloth should look like a fearful animal. Make the child smile at the incongruity of her fancy, and her laugh will cure the horror of the dream and dispel the mist.—Arena.

The Century Magazine is redeeming its promise to cover the war of 1861-65, through the campaigns of 1861-65, through the late and shorter war demands much less time and space in the magazine, and, in fact, as a magazine feature, the April and May numbers will practically close the series so far as it relates to active operations.

In April an article of extraordinary interest and importance is rear-Admiral Sampson's full and frank statement of the part taken by "The Atlantic Fleet in the Spanish War."

Major-General Francis V. Green, one of the highest living authorities on modern warfare, gives a full account from personal experience of the actual capture of Manila, and John T. McCutcheon describes the surrender of Manila as viewed from Admiral Dewey's flagship. Mr. McCutcheon was on the bridge with Dewey during the action.

The policy of the Ladies' Home Journal, in its religious department, seems to be always to engage the pen of the man most immediately prominent in the eyes of the religious world. Thus it has had the services of Mr. Beecher, Doctor Talmage, Doctor Parkhurst, Ian Maclaren, and now it will have those of Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, the new pastor of Plymouth Church in Brooklyn. Dr. Hillis has given the Journal a series of articles upon which he had been working for over a year previous to his Eastern call, and the first of these articles will be published in the next issue of the magazine. The series is all connected in thought, and presents the general subject of "The Secrets of a Happy Life."

Colonel Roosevelt reaches the climax of his narrative of the Rough Riders in his description given in Scribner's of the battle of San Juan Hill. This was the culmination of the Santiago campaign, and Col. Roosevelt has spared no pains to embody in it every fact of importance in regard to the action of the cavalry in the battle. This was the "great day" of the Rough Riders, and what they did is here put down by their commanding officer with historical accuracy and historical balance and judgment. It is an admirable piece of writing, not only for popular reading, but those who value permanent historical work.

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat, a Republican paper, has resurrected the old charge that Gen. Nelson A. Miles put iron on Jefferson Davis while he was imprisoned at Fort Monroe in 1865. This charge may be true, but it does not affect the truth of Miles' statement 34 years later about the rotten and embalmed beef fed to American soldiers by the dishonest agents of a corrupt commissary department. Miles told the truth and the revival of the war-time story cannot divert the attention of the people from the real facts of the present scandal.

The suppression of trusts has become a national issue that threatens to put the tariff and the currency questions in the background. The Democratic party took a firm stand on this vital question in its last platform and this year every candidate for office, big or little, should be required to toe the mark. No friend of trust should be allowed to get into office labeled as a Democrat. The people have a right to know how candidates for office stand on all such matters.

The Dispatch just now occupies a singular position. While the General Assembly was in session the Dispatch proposed and advocated the new election law, demanded its passage as the only measure that would insure honest elections and save the Democratic party. Now it says the Democratic party cannot afford to endorse the law, notwithstanding the Republicans everywhere assault and condemn it. —Russellville Herald-Ledger.

The April Ladies' Home Journal introduces its readers to its favorite illustrations, who are shown in a page of photographic reproductions, at work in their studios. The little group of artists includes those whose work is most popular with the Journal's readers, who will be pleased to bring face to face with their favorites.

Mr. John A. Bell, the Democratic candidate for the Senate in Union, will, if nominated and elected, be the youngest member of the Senate. He will be thirty old three months before the election.

Hon. G. W. Hickman, one of the brightest young Democrats in the last Legislature, has been renominated without opposition in McLean county.

Guessing the Age of Niagara.

Some interesting speculations concerning the age of Niagara gorge are reported by nature. This was the subject of a paper by Prof. G. Frederick Wright, read at the Boston meeting of the American Association. The late Dr. James Hall early noted the significant fact that "the outlet of the chasm below Niagara falls is scarcely wider than elsewhere along its course." This is important evidence of the late date of its origin, and it has been used in support of the estimates which have been made concerning the length of time separating us from the glacial period. A close examination made by Prof. Wright last summer greatly strengthens the force of the argument, since he found that the disintegrating forces tend to enlarge the outline and give it a V shape more rapid than has been supposed. As a result of his investigation he concludes that a conservative estimate of the rate of disintegration for the seventy feet of Niagara shales supporting the Niagara limestone would be one inch a year, with a probable rate of two inches a year.

But at the lowest estimate no more than 12,000 years would be required for the enlargement of the upper part of the mouth of the gorge, 1,000 feet on each side, which is very largely in excess of the actual amount of enlargement. Some of the recent estimates, therefore, which would make the gorge from 30,000 to 40,000 years old, are regarded as extravagant.

According to Prof. Wright the age of the gorge can not much more than 10,000 years, and is probably considerably less.—Marine Record.

Perpetual Motion.

Here is the "philosophy" of perpetual motion, as solved by an up-to-date philosopher:

Rags make paper.
Paper makes money.
Money makes banks.
Banks make loans.
Loans make poverty.
Poverty makes rags.
Rags make—well, just keep repeating the above.

given in full:GEN. HARDIN TALKS.Sounds The Key Note of His Campaign at Shepherdsville.States His Position on The Election Law and Other Party Measures.

Shepherdsville, Ky., March 28.—

The Hon. P. Wat Hardin, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, spoke here to-day in the Bullitt county court house.The court house was crowded to its fullest capacity, and cheer upon cheer greeted the various points made by the speaker. As the situation now is, Mr. Hardin is the strongest candidate before the voters of Bullitt county, and his friends say he is sure to get its friendly vote in the State Convention.
Mr. Hardin spoke with his usual ease and fluency, and it was evident that the audience was almost unanimously in accord with him.Mr. Hardin said he had decided to run because he felt that he owed it to the party; he said that he wanted no diversions from the main issues embodied in the Chicago platform,
The Goebel election law, McChord Railroad Bill and Chin School Bill were not specified in his remarks, but it was plain that these were among the things classified as diversions. He denied that while Attorney General
he had employed Mr. James Helm and others to assist him in the discharge of his duties, saying that Gov.
Knott and Gov. Buckner were the only ones authorized to secure extra legal services. He denied that he was the candidate of the corporations and railroads, and said that Mr. James Helm was his kinsman and Gen. Bass Duke his friend, but the Democracy of Kentucky was too manly to even ask of a candidate that he renounce the bonds of blood and friendship to win votes.He concluded with a straightforward statement of his position, now and in the past, on the financial issue, and pointed to the sacrifice he had made in 1895, when the stand he took for silver caused him to lose the election.As the chief interest at this time attaches to his views on the election bill, his remarks on that subject are given in full:Electoral Law a Diversion.
The diversions which have been attempted to be made in the interest of the various candidates for office by reason of bills submitted at the last session of the Legislature, which either became laws or were defeated, I have assumed would be understood by everybody. They are all—that is the fundamental principle of all—fully embodied in the general statements contained in the Chicago platform, and whatever may be the specific measure, the object of which is to carry into effect these principles, shall receive my hearty co-operation and support.The means by which these ends are to be reached are so controlled by conditions and circumstances that I believe it unwise to make any particular measure a part and parcel of our platform.One of the fundamental principles of our Republican form of government is full, fair and free elections at which every voter is entitled to cast his ballot and have it counted as thrown. All of our laws were enacted for this sole purpose. There is not pending in the party at this time any proposition, question or issue to change, modify or repeal any law passed for this purpose, nor will such a proposition be considered, except it shall hereafter appear by reason ofBeware of Ointments for Catarrh

"APRIL SHOWERS"

Bring May Flowers—Stormy Conditions as an Accompaniment.

Hicks' April summary is as follows: Centering on the 3rd and 4th, look for rise of temperature, falling barometer and many showers with bluster and thunder. Change to high pressure, west winds and much cooler, with snow on northern sides, will wind up the perturbation. The moon passes over the celestial equator on the 7th and is new on the 10th, indicating that a very warm wave for the season will appear during this period. A general low barometer will also develop and many storms of rain and hail will cross the country from west to east, reaching the maximum about Saturday, Sunday and Monday, the 8th, 9th, and 10th, and will be followed promptly by sharp change to cooler on and about the 11th. About the 14th to 16th look for showery conditions to deepen into heavier and more general storms, with much hail in many sections. Change to much "cooler," with frosts northward, will follow in the wake of storms. From the 19th to Friday 21st, look out for heavy storms of thunder rain and hail. Another spell of cool weather with frost northward will naturally follow after the storms of this period, lasting for several days. There are no reasons why April should not prove a very pleasant month generally for the pushing of all agricultural work. The month goes out as a storm period comes in, which will culminate in the first days of May.

In Memoriam.

On the night of March 15, 1899, while the storm was raging without, the spirit of Mrs. Mary A. Gooch calmly and peacefully took its flight to the God who gave it. Mrs. Gooch was the widow of Elijah Gooch, to whom she was married November 10, 1843, and who died May 19, 1861. Mrs. Gooch was born the 22nd of June 1825, dying in her 74th year.

At the early age of seventeen, our beloved friend became a Christian, uniting with the Methodist church, of which she was a devoted and consistent member, until called to her reward. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord." Mrs. Gooch had been an invalid for many years, during which time, she bore her affliction with patience and fortitude, under the faithful and devoted care of her daughters who have in their great grief, the sympathy of many friends. Her protracted illness elicited more fully her patience and submission under suffering. For many days she had a premonition that she would soon be "at home beyond the river." Her chief thought was of God, whose spirit graciously abode with her, and prepared her heart for the transition. With Christian faith and hope and the saints' blessed assurance, she continued in joy and peace, until the summons came to cross over and be with God. While the shadows of sorrow have gathered over the homes of her disconsolate children, hers is one of joy and brightness. Mrs. Gooch was very loyal to her friends and sympathized with all who suffered and sorrowed. Never has the writer heard her say anything unkind of anyone. Her bright smile of welcome did one so much good, and will always live in our hearts.

"Her life is now done,

The conflict is ended,

The glory began."

GOSPEL MEETINGS.

At the Universalist Church March 31 to April 9 inclusive.

Universalists of this city and vicinity will hold a series of meetings the first of April. Rev. W. H. McGlandlin, D. D., of Atlanta, Ga., has been engaged to assist the pastor in their meetings. He is one of the leading ministers of the Universalist church in the South. It may be well to say, while he firmly stands for his faith, he has a charitable regard for all who differ from him in religion. Those who would ascertain a clearer and an unbiased view of Universalism cannot afford to lose the opportunity of hearing him. To add to the enjoyment of the meetings, will be good music being prepared for the occasion. Friends of the cause are earnestly requested to make an effort to attend all services. Evening services at 7:30 p. m. A most cordial invitation is given to every body to attend.

Universalist Church.

Rev. Arthur Roberts pastor, Sundry school at 9:30, preaching 11 a. m. and 8:30 p. m. Morning Sermon followed by communion. Evening: "Nature of Christ." All members and all interested are especially requested to be present. Every body cordially invited to worship with us. Also preaching at 7:30 this evening.

How to Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours: a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys: if it stains your water, evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass if or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passages, and is capable of removing the heat and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following the use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. At druggists fifty cents or one dollar.

You may have a sample bottle and a book that tells more about it, both sent absolutely free by mail, if you send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing be sure and mention that you read this generous offer in the HOPKINSVILLE KENTUCKIAN.

BIG CONCERN.

Has Been in Successful Operation for Nearly Half Century.

THE PUDGY IDOL PROTESTS.

I may be a pudgy idol, but they make me do penance for this. By rubbing my skin with ham and puncturing it with needles, I am stung with infinite pain and then, when I howl and cry, Am I not a wretched creature from cruel to leather pie? What wonder I'm mien-eolic, that I wiggle and squirm and wriggle wobbly from scabs to an infant gub.

The department of the interior protects not our small insides. From motions and mixtures mighty of virtue, we are born.

They try us with starting toses, with dizzying swings and swirls. Their tongue which curles on temper, two widest and widest protest, into the wild yell.

Into ghoulish and goblin language well flavored with witches' spells.

The girls pick us up and hug us when they sleep as we lie beside them. They give us kisses from which we would gladly flee; why cannot they mind our protests, and tuck us in baby eyes?

Such might appreciate kisses nor mind if they needn't turn those misses to practice their arts on us.

And the language they waste on "we uns" would make a terrible grin.

It sounds like a cracked "grammar school" into a mongrel din:

Each sound is a good-sense language they can't understand.

Then when we are bigger wonder why we are so slow to learn:

It specifies details forgot it, this mixture of verbal smells.

But to learn much 'till we unlearn it would be foolishly vain and rash.

Baldheaded folks are the sages, and we believe them to be wise.

We know a million secrets that older folks never knew:

We're onto their fads and fancies, their ways, upstart and wild.

By which they warp a wistome, wiggle, and sometimes, chuckling children, give it to us, these folks awhile.

We would make them faints their tony,

the depth of their impudent smile.

With the touch of baby's troubles oft hid in a baby's smile.

L. EDGAR JONES.

SAM'S STRIKE.

BY H. A. KEMBLE.

Sam lived on a farm with his folks not far from Philadelphia. His father, Mr. Watson, was a very intelligent man, and often told Sam to read the daily papers, so that he could understand what was going on in the country.

Sam did so, and for a boy of 11 years was pretty well up in the happenings of the outside world. If there was one thing the boy hated, it was being pulled out of his comfortable bed early in the morning to help feed and water the cattle, draw water for his mother and perform various other of the little odd jobs which, according to boyish ideas, go to make a boy's life miserable.

About this time the papers were full of news about strikes and strikers, and Sam followed these up with great care. In fact, his mind now ran almost entirely in this direction. Even when he went fishing down by the old black hole, where he always caught loads of suckers and catfish, he couldn't scare up a bite, "for," he growled, "them fish have struck, too."

In school several times Sam thought of going on a strike when paring came around. He hated paring, but upon looking at the heavy ruler on the teacher's desk he realized he wouldn't; for that same ruler might go on a strike, and he knew how he would feel if there was no arbitration committee between him and the ruler. He'd been there before.

One afternoon Sam came back disgusted from one of his fishing trips, for he had only caught one poor little sunfish, and had lost his hook trying to pull in an old tomtoe can, under the impression that it was a "slap-in big sucker."

He was disgusted with living, and after supper sat down on the back porch, with his face in his hands and elbows on his knees, "thinkin'." By and by he jumped up, exclaiming:

"I ain't going to get up-to-morrow morning; I'm going to strike. Don't the paper say us children requires more sleep than grown-up folks, hey? Didn't pop tell me to always read the papers? What's the good-of reading if you don't believe?"

Accordingly, he went off to bed determined to strike the next morning.

About five o'clock the following morning his father came to the foot of the stair calling: "Sam! Sam!"

Receiving no reply, he climbed upstairs and shook his son, saying, good-humoredly:

"Come, my son, time to get up!"

To his utter amazement, Sam replied:

"I ain't going to get up mornings early any more. I've struck for longer time in bed."

Mr. Watson turned his head away to hide a smile, while he said: "All right, my son," and went downstairs, while Sam rolled over in bed and hugged himself with joy at the success of his scheme.

Meanwhile, his father was seated in the dining-room below, eating his breakfast. After relating the particulars of the strike to his wife, he said:

"Marv, I tell you, when Sam comes downstairs, don't give him my breakfast. He's not working for this firm any more, and at present, from a business standpoint, has no claim upon us, remember?"

Sam lay in bed, trying to sleep again; but it was no go. The birds sang loudly outdoors, and the fresh morning air came blowing in his window, and altogether he didn't seem to enjoy lying in bed as he thought he would.

After squirming all around the bed for a couple of hours, making a tent out of the covers by poking his feet up for poles, lying on his back and seeing how near he could come to touching the headboard with his feet, and various other bedchamber gymnastics, he concluded to go down to breakfast. Upon entering the dining-room he didn't see any signs of his expected repast.

"Say, ma, where's my breakfast?"

"Breakfast?" said his mother. "Why, you're stuck!"

You can't get any breakfast here. When hands strike they lose all claim on the firm. I'm sorry, but if you can't work on our terms I'm sure we can do anything for you."

At this moment in comes the head of the firm, Mr. Watson, with an armload of wood and a scuttle of coal.

Somehow or other Sam didn't feel right, for this was his work, and he knew that his father worked hard all day.

"Belong to the Knights of Rest, my boy?" laughed his father.

But Sam didn't smile—only slid out of the room and kept out of the way until schooltime. As the morning advanced, Sam began to feel hot low under his jacket. At noon he found that he had forgotten his hunch; or, rather, his mother had not planned any.

The other boys, however, took out big pieces of pie and nice brown doughnuts and munched them, while Sam grew hungrier and hungrier, and after awhile moved off where he couldn't see them eat.

Oh, what a vacancy he seemed to have under his jacket. He felt as if he could eat the stale bread his mother threw to the chickens.

"I wonder if real strikers get hungry?" mused Sam. "Blamed if I can hold out much longer."

The afternoon session found the young striker in his seat, pale and nervous.

As the hour of closing neared, Sam felt very faint and sick. It seemed to him as if his stomach would forget how to work, having had nothing to practice on for so long.

"Pshaw! what a long day!" Sam thought, as he walked slowly home with his books over his shoulder. "Oh, but I'm hungry! I wonder if those poor little duffers what sells what papers in town ever feel like this? Jiminy, I'll buy papers from 'em every time I have any money!"

Filled with this philanthropic idea, he reached home in time to smell the cooking going on in the kitchen—coffee, fried potatoes sizzling and sputtering.

"My, how good they do smell!" thought Sam.

About a quarter of an hour before supper time Mrs. Watson saw a wan, hungry boy, with big eyes, gazing through the window panes upon the table, with its snowy linen, flaky bread, raspberry jam, golden butter and other delicacies.

She thought she heard a sob, and was sure she saw one big tear after another closing down this same face.

Her warm mother's heart beat madly given her more than once during the day, as she thought of their poor, hungry young striker; but upon seeing that wee-begone, teary face, her own eyes grew misty and, rushing out of the door, she caught him up with a tight hug and carried him, big boy as he was, into the kitchen, where she dropped him in front of the table and dexterously shoved a big bowl of bread and milk before him.

The poor boy's hungry eyes lit up, and how that bowl became empty so quickly was a mystery.

Another followed, and another; then came a slice of cold ham, which had just followed the rest, when he heard his mother say:

"H'h! here comes your father; run to bed!"

Sam quickly obeyed her and was soon in his own room.

"Where's our young 'striker?" asked his father, seated at the table, qualified fragrant coffee diminishing the stack of snow-white bread in front of him. "Seems to me as if he must be pretty well starved out by this time."

Mrs. Watson made no reply, but clattered among the dishes, while her husband gazed at her quizzically.

Sam, by this time tired and full, had fallen asleep, so his mother found him, as she stole into his room to give him her good-night kiss.

The next morning, at the usual time, Mr. Watson called from the foot of the stairs again:

Receiving no answer, he repeated the call. Still no reply.

"My, what a stout youngster! I thought yesterday would have starved him out. Well, to-day'll fix him, anyhow."

He then went into the kitchen, where he found a big pile of food, together with a full scuttle of coal, by the stove.

"Strange," he muttered. "I don't remember filling that scuttle or

QUAILS IN EUROPE.

Can Be Protected Only by International Agreement.

Birds have always been bringers of omens, and sometimes political prophets. The calandrus foretold the death of kings, rocks the decline of families, storks the decay of empires. But it has been left to the quails of the end of the nineteenth century to demonstrate the narrow and artificial character of the European system of states. Birds are divided into the stay-at-home races and those which are citizens of the world. The former are contented with a garden, or at most a county; the latter, even for a twelvemonth of life, are satisfied with nothing less than a continent. As earth as the earth was not overfilled with men those birds which were citizens of the world could afford to overlook the narrow and temporary limitations of human states, and continued their immemorial way of life, going and coming, and increasing after their kind. But of late years the settlement and leveling up of human life in the remoter regions of the world have made a vast difference to the old order of things. From the Arctic tundra to the Nile valley, less at the extremes perhaps, but most emphatically in the central and old states of Europe, the well-being and continuance of most animal life depends on the will of man.

This has been recognized politically, and most European states have established legal protection of game and other edible birds. This "sectional" protection is effective to preserve the stay-at-home species. But each country of Europe also receives an increment of migratory edible birds, mainly from the extremes towards the north, or the equator. From the former come the woodpecks and snipe, wild geese, and ducks. From the south enter a stream of edible birds, comparable only to the herring shoals of the sea, in the form of quails from Africa. The difference between the two sets of immigrants is that the first breed elsewhere, but come to us for the winter, while the quails spend their winters in Africa, but come to Europe to nest. In both cases it has been assumed that the birds' numbers replenish themselves, and that the quantities killed make no difference to the next year's immigration; rightly, until recently, in the case of the northern birds, which nest in an almost uninhabited region, and are undisturbed; wrongly in the case of the quails, because they are killed on their way to their breeding ground in central and western Europe.

The result is that in France the quail is becoming scarce, and sportsmen, instead of bagging 20 or 30 brace in a day, have to be content with only five or six brace. In Switzerland, Austria and parts of Germany the same scarcity is noticed. The European game state, which can protect its nomadic partridges, pheasants and grouse, is too small and local to protect the quail; and nothing but an international agreement is wide enough for the purpose.—London Spectator.

You Can't Dodge Them

Did you ever try to dodge the rain-drops? Did not succeed very well, did you? It's just as useless to try to escape from the germs of consumption. You can't do it. They are about us on every hand and we are constantly taking them into our lungs.

Then why don't we all have this disease? Simply because these germs cannot gain a foothold in a strong throat and lungs. It's when these are weak that the germs master. The body must be well supplied with fat. The danger comes when the blood is poor and the body is thin. If your cough does not yield, and your throat and lungs feel raw and sore, you should not delay another day.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-Liver Oil with Hypophosphites at once. It will heal the inflamed membranes and greatly strengthen them as well. The digestion becomes stronger, the appetite better and the weight increases. The whole body becomes well fortified and the germs of consumption cannot hold.

It's this nourishing, sustaining and strengthening power of SCOTT'S EMULSION that has made it of such value in all wasting and exhausting diseases.

ON A STUMP

Dave Torian Was Thrown and Mortally Wounded.

Lived Only a Few Moments After Being Crushed Internally By the Wheel.

□ A colored teamster on Mr. John Green's farm was instantly killed Monday evening while driving an empty wagon in the cedar grove where Mr. Green is getting out fence posts for the I. C. road. The man's name was Dave Torian and he was standing on a wood frame driving his team through the new ground and talking to a man in the rear. While looking backwards the wheel struck a stump and threw him head foremost on the double-tree of the wagon and the frightened mules turned aside and ran into another stump. Torian in falling was caught between a stump and the wheel and crushed to death. His injuries were internal and proved fatal in a few moments. A companion ran to him and said "Dave, I told you to drive more carefully." His only words were "Yes, yes, it's too late." When picked up he was dead.

Torian was 21 years old and had lived all his life with Mr. Green, who regarded him as one of his best hands.

CROFT-HENSLEY.

Popular Young People Married Near Macedonia Yesterday Afternoon.

Rev. N. C. Lamb, of the Methodist church, performed the ceremony yesterday afternoon, uniting the destinies of two very popular young people of the Macedonia neighborhood. The contracting parties were Mr. J. R. Mrs. Mary Withers Sustained Injuries Which Resulted in Death.

Mrs. W. W. Ware received a telegram yesterday from Reidsville, N. C., announcing the death of Mrs. Mary Withers, formerly of this city. She died at 9 o'clock in the morning from the effect of injuries sustained by a fall. Deceased was the mother of Messrs. W. J. and Robt. Withers, formerly of this place. She was about 80 years old, and a year ago slipped and fell, sustaining injuries from which she had not fully recovered when the accident befell her.

STRUCK A STUMP,

Resulting in Injuries That May Prove Fatal.

Clyde Stauff, a young man working on the farm of J. W. Wilkins who lives on the Butler road, four miles east of the city, fell from the top of a load of hay Tuesday and was very badly injured. The young man in his descent struck a stump and his body was terribly bruised. It is feared that he received internal injuries.

DR. WARE'S INJURIES.

Not Hurt So Badly as at First Reported.

Dr. R. W. Ware, who was reported severely injured last Tuesday, was not seriously hurt. He did not fall from his loft on a pitchfork as reported, but was hooked by a cow and three ribs broken. He is up and going about as usual, though he had a sore side for a few days.
